Bibliography

Bibliography Explained:

The first source listed, The Taliban, is a book I found in a subscription database (it is an e-book).

Author’s last name, author’s first name. Book title. City of Publication: Publisher, Year of Publication. Name of database. Web. Date of access.
The second source listed, Global Conflicts in the 20th Century, is a book I found on a shelf.

Author’s last name, author’s first name. Book title. City of Publication: Publisher, Year of Publication. Print.

The third source listed, “Video Games are Great Tools for Learning,” is a magazine article I found in a subscription database.

Author’s last name, author’s first name. “Article title.” Name of magazine Date of publication: Page numbers. Name of database. Web. Date of access.

The fourth source listed, “Global Conflicts: How do they impact you?” is a website I found using the Google search engine. The information I am using is NOT a newspaper or magazine article. The information is only on the website, nowhere else.

Author’s last name, author’s first name. “Article title.” Name of website. Name of the website’s sponsor. Date of publication. Web. Date of access.

The fifth source listed, “Texting Tools for Teens,” is a journal article I found in a subscription database.

The sixth source listed, “How to Cite Your Sources,” is a newspaper article I found in a subscription database.

Author’s last name, author’s first name. “Article title.” Name of newspaper Date of publication. Page number. Name of database. Web. Date of access.
The seventh source listed, “The Educational Benefits of Video Games,” is an entry written in a database by someone who works for the database company. The entry was never in a newspaper, magazine, book, or anywhere else.

Author’s last name, author’s first name. “Article title.” Name of database.

Publisher of database, Date of publication. Web. Date of access.

The eighth source listed, Tiananmen Square, is a photograph found online. It is from a site that does not give any information about the photographer, title of the photograph, or the month and day it was taken. The first part, even though it looks like a title, is a description I created.

Description of Photograph. Year photograph was taken, N.p., n.d. Web. Date of access.

The ninth source listed, Tiananmen Square, is a photograph found in an online subscription database. All of the information about the photograph is provided.

Photographer’s last name, photographer’s first name. Photograph title. Date photograph was taken. Name of database. Web. Date of access.